Helm indicated that the arguments and accompanying exhibits demonstrated that the invention detailed by claim 4 where dioleoylphosphatidylethanolamine was the required surfactant in the honeycomb structure film was non-obvious over the prior art. Helm provided several suggestions for an examiner's amendment to limit the claims to this embodiment and place more of the claims in condition for allowance. The amendment is as detailed in the accompanying examiner's amendment. Kramer indicated that he would take the suggestions to the applicant. On September 2, 2011, Kramer indicated that the applicants had found the suggested amendment to be acceptable.
